ABOUT JIM

The person behind GeoRadar

Jim Wilkins owns and leads GeoRadar Australia. A former exploration driller, he joined the company as a locator in Emerald, took it over as its founder retired, and moved it home to Bundaberg - doing every job himself in that first year, from locating to potholing to backfill.

Today it's a three-branch team of fifteen-plus, and Jim is focused on something bigger than any single job: lifting safety standards on site and inspiring the next generation into the trades. He speaks plainly, from real experience, and leaves audiences with something they can use.
